

K9Caller FAQ

What is it?

A system that is installed in a vehicle and is designed to protect a dog from heat exhaustion. It is integrated with remote start, keyless entry and car alarm features for added protection and convenience.

Who needs it?

Anyone who travels with a dog in a vehicle. It is designed for working dogs or the family companion alike. Every dog travels with their people at least once a year to the Veterinarian for shots. If you make one stop at a store on the way then the system is useful to you. Even in moderate weather conditions the temperature inside of a vehicle can be 30 degrees hotter than the outside air temperature and reach dangerous levels for a dog in minutes. A dog can go into distress in as little as 10 minutes.

How does it work?

The system has two programmable temperature settings which are used to trigger the vehicle to start and run the AC and to report that the vehicle's interior cabin temperature has reached levels which are dangerous to a dog.

How much does it cost?

The average cost for the standard system is $559.00. This includes the vehicle specific data module. Shipping and sales tax may also apply.

Can I install it myself?

Typically, this type of system requires professional installation. Professional installation can be performed by any qualified car alarm installation company, car dealer or outfitter.

How much will installation cost?

On average, professional installation will cost $260 in labor for our standard system. The installation can typically be performed in one business day.

Will it void the warranty on my vehicle?

Adding this unit or any aftermarket accessory does not automatically void a vehicle's factory warranty. See US Code – Title 15, Chapter 50, Sections 2301-2312
